RAIL BETTER BY A COUNTRY MILE

2019 PWI Annual Convention – Rail: Better by a Country Mile

For the first time, we took the PWI Annual Convention to the country, held in Bathurst across two days (31 October to 1 November 2019). The response from PWI members and sponsors to having the Annual Convention in Bathurst was overwhelmingly positive, and everyone appreciated shining the spotlight on the history, people, challenges and successes of rail in the country.

The convention began on Thursday morning with a special PWI train departing from Sydney Terminal, winding its way over the Blue Mountains and on to Bathurst, with Howard Collins (Chief Executive Sydney Trains) serving as tour guide. Arriving at Bathurst station in the afternoon, delegates were taken to the voestalpine VAE Rail Fabrication Centre where the staff were delighted to show off their great work, guiding their guests through the process of rail welding, crossing and turnout machining, fabrication and assembly and glued insulated joint production.

It was clear that the team were extremely passionate about their work. The factory tour was followed by a pre-convention networking event, hosted by voestalpine VAE. A big thank you must to voestalpine VAE for not only hosting the PWI delegates for a factory tour and networking event, but also for shutting the factory early to prepare the workshop for our visit – it was pristine!

2020 PWI Annual Convention

On Friday, the day's proceedings were opened by the Hon. Paul Toole, Minister for Regional Transport and Roads, and State Member for Bathurst. Paul spoke about the long-running importance of rail to Bathurst and to regional NSW in general – it has helped the community remain connected to the rest of the state and has been instrumental in the success of the town. He spoke about the revitalisation of rail in the country with the second Bathurst Bullet service and the New Regional Fleet, with the maintenance and stabling facility being built out at Dubbo.

The Minister also accepted a donation from the PWI NSW on behalf of the Daffodil Cottage in Bathurst from proceeds of the special PWI train ticket sales.

The first paper of the day was presented by Frank Johnson, long time figure in the rail industry and Chair of Engineering Heritage Sydney, Engineers Australia, Sydney Division. Frank's paper, 1855 and all that – 164 years of the NSW rail network provided a reflection on how the NSW country railway network developed, what drove this development, what it achieved, and some of the ups and downs throughout the years. Frank charted the rapid expansion of the network, including inter-colonial lines, branch lines through the wheat belt, and pioneer lines, through to the decline of the country network from the early 1980's and the current management of the network.

2020 PWI Annual Convention

David Mackney, Manager of Maintenance Delivery at John Holland Country Regional Network (CRN) provided an outline of the CRN and John Holland's operations and maintenance of the network. He highlighted some of the unique challenges to maintaining and operating such a vast network; budgets are constrained, many lines are seasonal or low use, assets are ageing, non-operational corridors still need to be inspected, and the daily commute for the workforce can literally be a day. The CRN, however, is being upgraded to accommodate 'bigger, faster and heavier' trains, such as the upgrade works through the Fixing Country Rail program proposed for the Junee to Griffith line.

The second session started with Jim Modrouvanos, A/Executive Director Freight Industry, Transport for NSW, spoke of the growing freight task in NSW and the importance of rail in accommodating that growth. Freight rail is making a resurgence with programs like Inland Rail, the Parkes and Wagga Wagga Special Activation Precincts and Fixing Country Rail projects all adding to increases in rail productivity through provision of new loops, new corridors, track capacity upgrades and new sidings.

Graham Nelmes, A/Director Strategic Rail Transport and Melissa Jovic, Associate Director, Corridor Development from Transport for NSW, continued the theme of improving rail productivity for regional NSW. Graham presented the Fast Rail vision for NSW that will increase connectivity to regional areas through fast and efficient rail services to draw in more investment, generate job opportunities and attract skilled workers. Melissa outlined the methodology that the project using to develop these corridors and highlighted some of the challenges that are being met, including extreme topography, significant water crossings, environmental constraints such as National Parks, and the major infrastructure required.

New for 2019, our panel session included the team leads, managers and supervisors from the Alan Barham Maintenance Team awards. Chaired by Kirsty McGeachie from Sydney Trains, the session explored some of the challenges of maintaining track in regional NSW and in the Sydney metropolitan area, the processes used attracting, training and developing a high performing team, and some of the most significant achievements these teams had. This was a great session to show a side of the rail industry that is not often explored, and to explore the passion and dedication of our maintenance teams.

Alan Swaby, Head of Business Development from voestpine Signalling Fareham Ltd then presented a very innovative paper on 'Transforming switch maintenance to a predict and prevent system. Alan was involved in implementing a switch condition monitoring concept trial for ARTC to transition from reactive maintenance to predictive and reliability-centred maintenance. The final paper of the day was not directly rail-related, but of great importance to the future of how regional communities get around. Simon Berry, NSW Business Leader of Highways at Amey presented on the Dubbo driverless vehicle trial, aimed at addressing the transport need in regional NSW but also reliant on efficient long-distance transport modes like regional rail services. Simon highlighted some of the technical details of the trial and the vehicles, the regional specific requirements such as using traditional powertrains, a production platform and a vehicle designed for environments similar to regional Australia. The expected results of the trial will be to develop a viable, scalable and valuable solution for regional Australia, contribute to the body of knowledge and experience of automated vehicles within NSW, and generate uptake, excitement and acceptance of automated technology by the citizens and tourists of Dubbo.

The day was capped off with a networking event sponsored by voestalpine VAE where delegates could catch up with old friends and make new ones.

Thank you to all of our corporate and enhanced corporate members, particularly our platinum corporate members CPB Contractors, John Holland, Laing O'Rourke and Lendlease, for their continued support and helping the PWI NSW make this one of the best-value conferences around.

2020 Annual Convention

Thank you also to our presenters and session chairs for making the day such a great success – the outstanding response to our first country convention means that it won't be the last!

Throughout the day, we continued the tradition of recognising outstanding performers in the rail industry, and the 2019 PWI NSW award winners are listed overleaf.

Planning is underway for the 2020 PWI Annual Convention, so keep an eye out for the call for papers. It will be based in Sydney this year so we expect a bumper turnout!

PWI Annual Convention Awards Are Open

PWI NSW has five annual awards each year for welding, track maintenance, young achievers, innovation and platelaying (track/turnout installation).

Presentation and recognition of permanent way achievement in the past 12 months not only acknowledges efforts, it is also an opportunity to advertise your achievements amongst industry peers and prospective clients.

PWI NSW Awards Nominations

To nominate you must be a financial PWI NSW member or have at least one financial PWI NSW member in your team.

We want our managers and leaders for all our member organisations to encourage both individual and teams to nominate for these prestigious awards in 2018.

These awards are presented during the PWI Annual Convention in October. All Award submissions, except the Young Achiever Award, close at the end of July each year with projects completed in the previous 12 months eligible for entry.

Award categories are:

- Alan Barham Maintenance Award
- Ken Erickson Innovation Award
- Steve Maxwell Platelaying Award (Minor and Major categories)
- Welders Award

Submission templates, criteria and other relevant information for each award category can be found on the PWI website: pwinsw.org.au/awards
